Q40. Recently, the U.S. Department of Commerce, the agency that oversees the U.S. Census, announced the 2020 Census will include a question on citizenship. While that question has been asked before, it has not been asked as a census question since 1960. The Commerce Department says it's necessary to prevent voting rights violations. Opponents say the question will lessen participation and lead to an undercounting in the census.
