Cultural Components that Affect Life Chances

felt role models were very or somewhat significant

"...to make sure they have the relationships and the mentors in place to help them move out of their situation."

"Youth might not have the right networks or the right people to get them to where they want to go."

"Mentorship is very important because kids need guidance."

"If they can come to an afterschool program and relate to someone closer to their age, it is very beneficial for them to have that support."

"Being around positive adults and other positive kids means so much and it is so important. Any other skill that they are learning while they are in that environment [after school programs] is just the cherry on top" "When a person's heart really isn't into what they're doing, especially dealing with young people in their formative years, that is such a disservice. When you've got a person who is vested in the betterment of that young person, there's a connection like none other."
